PASSING AROUND PROSPERITY

Los Angeles, Cal., May 1.—"If prosperity is to be passed around, there must first be the prosperity to pass around," declares President Silvas Evans of Occidental College. "Snallow and puerile thinkers are tempting wage earners and salaried men with vain imaginations to the effect that a civilization can have its pie and eat it at the same time," President Evans warned. He said further: "Whatever may be the future basis of distribution of the rewards of labor, the stars in their courses determining big economic principles will see to it that there must be vigorous production and thrift creating capital which is the instrument of production."

"High salaried men and monied men of leisure need this lesson also. It is hard for the average man to maintain sanity in his thinking and his working when he has flaunted before him constantly evidences of brutal extravagances and vulgar ostentation. "Thrift is fundamental for moral character and national prosperity. Any government will serve one of the fundamentals of life and national prosperity if that government can promote the virtue of thrift. The Thrift movement conducted by the United States Government cannot easily get the service of bands and the waving of flags, but it feeds into the very roots of our national life. We should do everything possible by personal example and earnest effort to promote this good movement."
